How we deal with your complaint

In some cases, further investigation may be required. However, we always try to provide an answer within three working days of receiving your complaint. If a resolution is agreed, we'll send you a letter outlining your right to refer the matter to the Financial Ombudsman Service.

If this isn't possible, we'll send you a written acknowledgment within five working days of receipt. This will include the name of the person who's dealing with your complaint, their contact details and confirm our understanding of the nature of your issues.

When will we contact you again?

You will either receive our final response to your complaint within four weeks of its receipt, or we'll write to you to explain why we've not been able to do so.

If after eight weeks you've not received a final response to your complaint, then we'll write to you explaining the reason for the delay.

If you wish to refer your complaint to the Financial Ombudsman Service, then we can explain the process and provide you with the necessary details. Alternatively, you may still choose to wait until we are in a position to provide our final response.

What do we mean by "final response"?

Our final response will detail the results of our investigation into your complaint and say whether it's been accepted or rejected. In either case we explain the reasons for our decision.

Where appropriate, we may make an offer of redress taking into account the individual circumstances of each case investigated.

This will not always involve financial redress and may simply involve an apology. Our aim is to treat all customers fairly.

What happens if you're unhappy with our response?

Our final response will provide details of whether you may take your complaint to the Financial Ombudsman Service if you remain dissatisfied following the outcome of our investigation.
